

Learning to Listen Featuring Sherry Turkle, PhD Chat Transcript

00:31:40 Kayla Savelli: Hi! The webinar will begin at 3:00pm.

00:52:20 Kayla Savelli: You can write any questions or comments for Josh to answer at the end of the Webcast into this chat!

00:57:36 Kayla Savelli: Hi Marva, we cannot make it any higher on our end. I am sorry.

01:01:11 Joshua Sparrow: This is a quote from Reclaiming Conversation

01:01:25 Joshua Sparrow: Looking forward to your reactions and questions

01:09:41 Joshua Sparrow: TO Cheryl - Yes - in the Face to Face Still Face research videos one can see the progression from resourcefulness in seeking to draw back in the parent to despair and dysregulation, but there are also variations with age, gender, and when a parent is struggling with different forms of depression.

01:10:56 Michael Accardi: copying Sarah Mudd's question here in the chat

01:10:59 Michael Accardi: Sarah Mudd 03:23 PM

As a parent of a middle schooler, the need for connection with peers is the driver and it becomes very hard to continue to say no to a phone when every one of her friends has one. I keep holding out but wonder how to balance her peer-to-peer needs with the risks to other areas of development and if there are recommendations.

01:15:38 Joshua Sparrow: Thank you for your questions and comments. We'll try to get to these later...
